BE A RANGELAND TRUST HERO

He grew up in Los Angeles, had a full career in law enforcement, and long dreamt of becoming a rancher. Ernest Bufford's opportunity came in 2001 when he purchased his first parcel – a rundown and exhausted landscape in Walker Basin. Ernest nursed that land back to a productive life, then an adjacent parcel became available. He bought that and set about restoring that piece as well.

Ernest wanted to know his hard work would be worthwhile. He partnered with the Rangeland Trust to conserve the first then second parcels. Each time, Ernest used the funds to purchase neighboring land for saving. He is a man with a mission: Not simply to own land, but to protect it.

Tonight, we are asking you to help conserve a newly added piece of land so that Ernest can continue to preserve this spread of open space, restore it to productive rangeland, and provide passage for wildlife moving between Tejon, Tehachapi, and Sequoia National Forest.

Raise your paddle for the gift level that is meaningful to you so that together we can help the Bufford family rescue more rangeland that benefits all of us! Your paddle raise will have a direct impact by creating another story of success for all who love the land in our great state.
